Phone Investigation Recording

Mr. Wang: Hello! Who is this?

Investigator: Hello, hello, is this the Nanchang Municipal Red Cross Society?

Mr. Wang: Yes. Who is this?

Investigator: I am calling from Beijing. I want to ask you about the organ donation situation in your office.

Mr. Wang: You are in Beijing, and you ask me about organ donations?

Investigator: Oh, I’m calling you, because I have heard that you guys are doing a good job. Recently I read an article, saying that in the last few months, November or so, there was an organ donation in your city. So I want to know how you are doing this so well? Because I am a volunteer for the Beijing Red Cross, and I have just retired and am now helping them. I would like to ask, because...

Mr. Wang: Oh, you, you are a volunteer for the Beijing Red Cross, right?

Investigator: Yeah.

Mr. Wang: The problem is that regarding corpse donations, we haven't done particularly well, either. As a result, we as a provincial capital city, only have 50 to 60 people registered to donate their bodies for one year.

Investigator: Oh, then about your real donations...I read somewhere that you have one donation this year. How many actual donations do you have this year?

Mr. Wang: How many are donated? Do you mean the successful donations?

Investigator: Yes.

Mr. Wang: Approximately 20 organ donations are successful in Nanchang City [this year].

Investigator: Oh, more than 20 donors in your entire city, that is?

Mr. Wang: Yes, the whole city.

Investigator: Do you have this kind of situation: some hospitals get organ donors without going through you?

Mr. Wang: Yes, how could it not? Every hospital in the country, I dare not, I cannot guarantee that all hospitals obey the law, right?

Investigator: Uh?

Mr. Wang: If they want to violate the law, [they can], as our Red Cross has no supervisory authority.

Investigator: Oh, no authority?

Mr. Wang: So it has to rely on their own health system to monitor [the procedures]. According to legal procedures, a legitimate process of corpse donation must be witnessed by the Red Cross system. Moreover, an individual cannot get through the procedures by himself. If the donation is taking place between two family members, such as from a father to his son, or from a husband to his wife, we don't have to witness this type of donations. However, if the donations are between unrelated people, who do not know each other, then we must witness it, and this type of donations must go through the platform of the Red Cross to be carried out.

Investigator: do you say that, for all the donors they [use] to perform surgeries, you have to issue testimonies for all donors?

Mr. Wang: No, they don't have to go through us.

Investigator: Oh, those hospitals can use their contacts and process the donations. That is, they don't have to go through you guys...

Mr. Wang: Yes, yes.

Investigator: Oh, that is to say, you...

Mr. Wang: Yes...because of this, this might lead to black marketeering.

Investigator: Oh, are you saying that if the hospitals find donors themselves, if they don't inform you, you won't have any idea?

Mr. Wang: We don't, what they do on their own black market is not our business!

Investigator: Oh.

Mr. Wang: But if someone reports, someone reports or takes any act in such nature, the hospital and the person, who provided the organs, will be entirely responsible for it. As regard to other illegal conducts, we surely cannot oversee these. After all, the government doesn't grant us any authority regarding this. And we cannot complain about this for sure, right?

Investigator: Oh, is it so? Ok, thank you. May I know your last name, please?

Mr. Wang: my last name is Wang.

Investigator: Mr. Wang, thank you!

Mr. Wang: ok, ok, you are welcome.
